ABSTRACT:

The invention relates to a method of generating a language model and a method of generating an acoustic model for a speech recognition system. There is proposed to successively reduce the respective training material by training material portions in dependence on application-specific data or to extend it to obtain the respective training material for generating a language model and the acoustic model.